

Dear Hiring Team,

The Provider Console role caught my attention because the problem is one I recognise: several products grown independently that need to feel like one platform. That is the work I have spent the last four years on.

At Abacum I built the Abax design system, adopted across five squads, and standardised formula syntax across the modeling layer after benchmarking competitors and reading customer calls. I also designed the Dataset Manager, a UI over JSON dataset configuration that let finance teams set up their own data without engineering support. That project made the same bet Provider Console is making on self-service.

At Remuner I was the sole designer for two years, owning the product surface and the design system, and shipped an AI agent where sales reps and managers consult their commission data and sales plans directly in the product. I live in Barcelona; two days a week in Gracia works. Portfolio: manel-leiva.com.

Best,
Manel
